FROM DEACON GEORGE DESK

Putting Our Gifts to Work

Sometimes we hesitate to offer what we have because we think it is not enough. Someone else seems more gifted, more confident, or better prepared. We tell ourselves that when we have more time or feel more capable, then we will step forward. In today's Gospel, Jesus reminds us that faithfulness begins with what has already been entrusted to us.

The master gives different amounts to his servants, but the two who put their gifts to work receive the same praise. What matters is not how much they received, but how faithfully they responded. The servant who buries his talent allows fear to keep him from acting. His gift remains unused, and an opportunity is lost.

Our gifts may not seem extraordinary. They may be the patience to listen, the willingness to help, the ability to encourage, or the time to visit someone who is alone. Yet these simple gifts can become instruments of God's love. We do not need to do everything. We need to respond faithfully to the opportunities before us.

Saint Paul calls us to remain awake and alert. This is more than waiting for the Lord's return; it is being attentive to his presence and his invitations today. Someone near us may need encouragement. A responsibility may need our attention. An opportunity to serve may be right in front of us.

As the Church's year draws toward its close, we are invited to ask: What am I doing with what God has entrusted to me? Is there a gift I have buried beneath fear or self-doubt? This week, choose one simple way to put that gift to work. Make the call. Offer the help. Speak the encouraging word. A faithful life is built through ordinary acts of love.

The Lord has gifted each of us in our own special way. May we be free from the fear that keeps us from sharing them. May we serve with a generous heart and recognize each day as an opportunity to love,

Deacon George
